The two sisters who had moved the plea after they received an e-mail describing their daughters as sister sluts and slut-aunt from an unidentified person, were being blackmailed by the man who was allegedly blackmailing them for money. The two sisters challenged the IT Act, which states that anyone making any communication can be held liable for a defamation. On July 21, 2011, the High Court had issued notices to the VHP, its general secretary Ashok Singhal, and the Uttar Pradesh police. The court also asked the secretary of VHP to file an affidavit on the application for issuing show cause notice against the petitioners. The court took into consideration a judgment, which said that libel is a mental defamation and the act of communicating the defamation does not change the character of the defamation itself.
